

2020 Tennessee Conference on Volunteerism and Service-Learning

February 9-11, 2020
Franklin, TN

Welcome!

Dear Service Leaders,

In times of change, we often ponder the question, “What can I really do to make a difference?” Volunteer Tennessee is honored to gather service leaders from across the state to share their collective knowledge in answer to this question during our 2020 Conference on Volunteerism and Service-Learning. If you are participating in this conference, we know you are serving as an agent of positive change in your community. In addition, we know that the answer to this question lies within you, within us. Anne Frank said, “How wonderful it is that nobody need wait a single moment before starting to improve the world.”

We are challenging conference participants to rethink the impact of their service, learn how to share their service experiences, and continue to collaborate to develop innovative new ways to support service and change our communities.

Thank you for your engagement and participation in our conference. We are proud of the service providers in our Volunteer State and are excited to share this time together with you.

Thank you for your service and enjoy the conference!

Sincerely,

Volunteer Tennessee and the Conference Planning Committee

Serve.
Learn.
Change.

Linda Ragsdale, President of The Peace Dragon

Linda Ragsdale wants everyone to be a dragon—a Peace Dragon, that is! Through her non-profit organization The Peace Dragon, Linda developed her Peace Dragon Tales to teach everyone how to harness their fiery energy into peaceful and productive outcomes by owning and activating their human powers of view, voice, and choice. Linda uses her life's path to show how peace has helped her navigate the challenges that have arrived at her own doorstep.

She's an illustrator, international speaker, peace teacher, and award-winning author, and whether she's sharing her fiction or non-fiction, you're sure to laugh, smile and maybe shed a tear or two. Either way, you'll walk away inspired to see, speak and choose with a compassionate consideration. Linda openly invites everyone to be a Peace Dragon ambassador and join the over 65,000 students she has taught around the world! Find her personal story of choosing peace, along with some fun Peace Dragon extras at www.ThePeaceDragon.com

Kerri Arnold, Miss Tennessee Volunteer 2019

Kerri Arnold was crowned Miss Tennessee Volunteer on June 22, 2019, at the Carl Perkins Civic Center in Jackson, Tennessee. As the newly crowned Miss Tennessee Volunteer, Kerri won $25,000 in college scholarships and travels over 80,000 miles speaking to over 70,000 schoolchildren about Character Education. Kerri serves as a Goodwill Ambassador for the five Children's Miracle Network (CMN) hospitals across the state. She also holds a position as an Official Friends of Monroe Carell Jr. Children's Hospital at Vanderbilt Board Intern.

As someone who was diagnosed with epilepsy at the age of five, Kerri has dedicated her life to raising epilepsy awareness. She created a movement for Kerri's Bill, which advocates seizure protocols in state schools in hopes of helping other epileptic children.

Kerri is a 21-year-old junior at the University of Tennessee at Martin where she majors in interdisciplinary studies. A native of Holladay, Tennessee, Kerri is a recipient of the Pearl S. Bell Character scholarship, HOPE scholarship and the Excellence Scholarship, as well as a member of the Phi Eta Sigma Honor Society.

First Lady Maria Lee

Maria was raised in Silver Spring, Maryland as one of five children. After graduating high school, she attended the University of Maryland where she studied Elementary Education. It was her heart for service that brought her to Nashville, Tennessee where she led girls in a youth ministry discipleship. Maria later became a third and fourth grade teacher at a local school where she also coached track.

Maria and Bill married in 2008. They are active members of Grace Chapel Church and are involved in numerous faith-based ministries that have taken them all over the world serving those in need. Maria currently serves on the board of Friend2Friend Book Project, a mission devoted to delivering uplifting literature to children and their families suffering from medical hardships.

As first lady, Maria wants to motivate others with her passion for service, and believes that through community engagement, fellow Tennesseans will be driven to serve their neighbors in need. As part of her initiative, Tennessee Serves, Maria is focused on serving the Volunteer State's distressed counties while highlighting organizations and people already doing great work throughout the state.

Welcome with Allie Duke, Youth Advisor, Nashville After Zone Alliance

Allie Duke is a junior in high school and serves as NAZA (Nashville After Zone Alliance)'s Youth Advisor. She is the creator of Youth in Action!, a youth-led leadership group of middle and high schoolers. Allie is a Scholastic Silver Key award-winning photographer who enjoys telling stories through her photographs, in the hope that viewers will see things in a different perspective and find connections to their community they might overlook otherwise. She speaks Chinese, tutors refugee youth and hopes to engage with others who are excited about uplifting youth voice in Nashville.

NAZA 's Youth in Action initiative is a leadership group of middle and high schoolers taking action in their community. They mentor middle schoolers in Nashville to help them think through issues and develop solutions at the after-school, school, and citywide level. The high schoolers work together with the middle schoolers' ideas (and their own) and implement them more widely alongside adult collaborators on the Youth Matters Committee. While they are in a pilot in North Nashville at the moment, their plan is to build out the initiative to include all of Nashville.

Food for Thought about World Hunger & Action Steps for Hosting a Meal-packing Event

Benjamin Blahauvietz, Student, Franklin Road Academy
Kendall Clark, Student, Franklin Road Academy
Brenda Huff, Director of Center for Philanthropic Studies, Geography Teacher, Franklin Road Academy

In Tennessee, 934,310 people are struggling with hunger - and of them 285,770 are children. 1 in 5 children struggle with hunger. The United Nations estimates that about 815 million people of the 7.6 billion people in the world were suffering from chronic undernourishment in 2016. Participants will become knowledgeable about hunger and food insecurity issues on a city, state, country and national level. They will also learn some possible action-steps that school communities can take to be part of solutions. Presenters will share the AHA! Service Learning Method I that breaks down the Service-Learning process (compliments IPARD) into 3 steps: Acquire Knowledge, Hone Understanding and Act! Workshop participants will hear, see, and do!

Community Involvement: Steps Toward Creating A Bond With Your Local Area

Yenni Gonzalez, Student, University School of Nashville
Emma Harris, Student, University School of Nashville
Jadyn Sheats, Student, University School of Nashville
Lillian Worley, Student, University School of Nashville

How do you make a difference in the lives of others? Establishing community partnerships can be a phenomenal and rewarding experience. This presentation will focus on how to assess the needs of a community, as well as how to engage an identified demographic. Community involvement requires identifying needs that are essential for a community's well-being. This workshop will help guide students' efforts to organize and create different initiatives in an identified neighborhood. Past, present, and future initiatives at University School of Nashville will be used to demonstrate the process of beginning (and maintaining) relationships within a community. Finally, participants will discuss the significance of community engagement through a question and answer portion, aiming to forge lasting connections between students, schools, and community members.

WORKSHOP SESSION 1

Collaborating For Success

Dave Worland, Executive Director, The Governor's Office of Faith Based & Community Initiatives
Daniel Henley, Faith Formation and Engagement Director, Agape Means Love (Memphis)
Chris Martin, President, Knoxville Leadership Foundation
Clydesdale

"It's a good thing to give a family a turkey at Thanksgiving. . . It's a better thing for them to be able to afford to buy their own turkey." Session attendees will share ideas, hopes, and dreams, and learn how to make better things happen in your community and strategize with leaders across Tennessee about best practices for successful collaborative efforts across the state. Come hear from leaders who are making a difference every day by working with church, community, business, and government leaders to solve problems from poverty to education to children's services to workforce readiness. Participants will learn about leveraging capacity to accomplish better things through strategic partnerships and bring new ideas to the table to solve problems.

Add a spark to your service-learning program by gathering ideas from like-minded educators and students. Attendees are encouraged to bring a sample or two from their experiences to share, or just listen to others. Have a question or situation to address? Come ask colleagues and students from across the state as we meet to engage in dialogue and interact with other middle and elementary school peers. Research says that students who begin service at an early age often continue to engage in service activities as teenagers and later pursue service-oriented professions and events as adults. Now is the time to take the next step by reviewing the tenets of service-learning and enhancing our programs.

WORKSHOP SESSION 2

No More Boring Debriefs! It's Time to Mix it Up

Susan Ragsdale, Managing Partner/Author, Write Creations Group, LLC
Ann Saylor, Master Trainer/Author, Write Creations Group, LLC
Franklin

Are you the designated person to lead reflection? Are you tired of journal prompts and sit around the circle discussions? Do you want to wow your group with something fresh and new? If you are ready to mix it up, join this session to reflect the Great Group Reflections way. Reflection is THE ingredient that pulls out “aha” realizations from service. Come learn the ins and outs of creating dynamic reflection experiences and see why taking time to reflect is so important. Participants can expect to participate in activities they can easily implement and learn on the spot tips for modifying reflection practices (modeled examples). Presenters challenge attendees to be one of the participants to lead a mini-activity in the session.

Based on the book Great Group Reflections: 60 Compelling Challenges to Prompt Self-Discovery & Critical Thinking, this session will leave participants with new ideas sure to inspire change—in how they reflect.

Improving Civic Engagement with Wikipedia: Educating Others as Service-Learning

Elizabeth Norell, Assistant Professor, Political Science, Chattanooga State Community College

Zachary Burnette, Student, Chattanooga State Community College

Arabian

In this workshop, a faculty member and students will demonstrate the potential for using Wikipedia in Education as a way to incorporate service-learning into existing (or slightly modified) research projects. Students become information developers, assisting others in the state who want to become better-informed about their state legislature.

In the process, students develop marketable skills, enhance their understanding of information literacy, and gain insight into the ways a changing media landscape make active civic engagement challenging. During the workshop, participants will hear what the project was like for students, common problems and pitfalls, and then brainstorm ways to incorporate Wiki projects into their own courses.

My First Book: Helping Students Use Their Talents to Create Books for Children in Need

Teresa Todd, French Teacher, Grades 9-12, Ensworth School

Dina Marks, English Department Chair, Grades 9-12, Ensworth School

Sara Bostwick, Spanish Teacher, Ensworth School

Lynn Vincent, Publications, Ensworth School

Carrie Cohen, Student, Ensworth School

Miranda Marks, Student, Ensworth School

Williamson

This session will demonstrate the processes for creating a service-learning project that teaches students to author, illustrate, translate, and use InDesign to create original children's books for those in need. These student-created books increase literacy among disadvantaged children and introduce the magic of owning their first book; at the same time, the students will develop and hone their artistic, writing, linguistic, and technological skills. Session participants will attend stations on the various components necessary for launching a program at their school, such as how to garner interest among students, how to manage student talent, why InDesign, and ways this project can be incorporated into a class. A student panel for questions will be followed by a general question and answer session. Time for reflection and discussion will allow session participants to adapt the program to be used at their own school.

Re-Centering Community: Human-Centered Design as an Innovative Approach to Community Development

Melissa Looby, Senior Program Coordinator, Office of Active Citizenship and Service at Vanderbilt University
Annie Irankunda, Coping and Resiliency Support Specialist, Catholic Charities of Middle Tennessee
Clydesdale

In the midst of not enough funding, strict regulations, too much work with not enough time or staff, and an ever-changing sociopolitical context, it can be all too easy to lose the authentic voice of the community in your work. In this workshop, participants will be introduced to human-centered design, a unique tool to re-center community in their work, find customized solutions to specific challenges, and how to utilize the process with their teams and volunteers. Using an example community challenge, participants will learn the five steps of human-centered design through a fun and highly interactive boot camp. The workshop will close with a reflection on benefits of human-centered design over traditional community development methods.

Trifecta: Three Class Service-Learning Programs That Support Community and Student Engagement

Kelly Rogers, Associate Professor, Murray State University

Arabian

This session will share three unique service-learning programs that bring students together with community partners to create and support positive change. Each of the programs supports the community in unique ways, while providing students with useful learning opportunities. Racer College Day provides 70 eighth graders with a college experience while giving students in event management and program development real planning and leadership experience. The Giving Back Endowment allows students in a grant making course the opportunity to create a Request For Proposals (RFP), create grant criteria and award a grant during the semester. Finally, event management students work with university and community partners to hold a Nonprofit Connections event each semester.

Students gain experience while university and community stakeholders attend the event for the purpose of advocacy, networking, idea generation, volunteer and intern recruitment. All three service-learning programs support student learning and community engagement.

Service Project with Healing Hands International

Healing Hands International is a non-profit, humanitarian organization that serves souls in need through clean water programs, agriculture education, empowerment for women, disaster relief, and gifts of love for children. The Disaster Recovery Program through Healing Hands assists families, churches, and communities immediately after a disaster in a variety of ways. One of the most immediate needs is personal hygiene kits, which we will assemble so they can be shipped to those in need as soon as a disaster occurs.

Service and service-learning experiences are rewarding experiences, especially when youth and adults collaborate to plan and implement the project. There can be challenges, however, which prevent the project from being as successful as possible. This interactive workshop, led by teen and adult members of the state 4-H council, will provide participants with best practices related to youth/adult partnerships. We will share tips and techniques to help bring the two groups closer together and better position them to function more as a team.

Scaling Your Organization's Impacts through National Service

Jason Scott, Program Director, Knoxville-Knox County CAC

Christine Doka, Assistant Program Director, Knoxville-Knox County CAC

Clydesdale

CAC AmeriCorps is an East Tennessee based national service program that has been in continuous operation since 1994. Over the past 4 years, CAC AmeriCorps has experienced over 70% growth in its National Service Intermediary Program growing from 40 AmeriCorps positions, to nearly 70. This means nearly 120,000 hours of service and $450,000 in education awards benefiting the people and communities we serve. This workshop will provide introductory insights into how intermediary national service systems function, will discuss best practices that make these systems valuable to members and partners, and how to interface with existing intermediary programs to leverage national service resources to increase the scale and scope of your organization's impacts.

An Interdisciplinary Approach in Service-Learning and Community Partnership Through STEAM

Seok Jeng Jane Lim, Associate Professor, Middle Tennessee State University

Karen Reed, Associate professor, Middle Tennessee State University

Wytne Theriot, Early Childhood Education student, Middle Tennessee State University

Arabian

This workshop will present strategies to equip preservice teachers in planning, implementing and evaluating curriculum using an interdisciplinary approach in service learning and community partnership. Partnering with the University's librarian and Maker Space, preservice teachers learned information literacy skills and integrated technology to create/fabricate prototypes for their lessons on STEAM (science, technology, engineering, arts, and math) initiatives. Implementations of lessons are carried out in the local Boys and Girls Club. With the new knowledge gained, the K-3 children from Boys and Girls Club are invited to the University's Maker Space to witness the actual implementation. Participants attending this workshop will be engaged during the process and provided with opportunities for small group discussion in promoting future interdisciplinary approach in service-learning and community partnership.

"Caring for Community"... A discovery of Service Learning in a Community/Public Health Nursing Course

Barbara Lancaster, Assistant Professor/Nurse Practitioner, Middle Tennessee State University

"Caring for Community" is an undergraduate community/public health nursing course of discovery, at MTSU. The course combines community-based service- learning within an academic program through a structured learning experience and community service. Students conduct a detailed windshield survey in a community in Middle TN. Through observation and discussion with local communities, students develop a service project. Several of the service projects will be exhibited for the showcase. The course provides the opportunity to explore outside the box of a hospital nursing role and includes a reflection component, allowing students' to see their growth, from that of observer to that of a community change agent! Showcase handouts will include service project guidelines, highlighted projects, and lessons learned, so other academic programs have a blueprint for incorporating community-based service-learning within an academic program.

Senior Volunteer Transportation Network (SVTN)

Keita Cole, SVTN Project Manager, Southwest TN Development District

The Senior Volunteer Transportation Network (SVTN) is comprised of a group of individuals, businesses and non-profits who are interested in transportation for older adults across the state of Tennessee. This program was started out of a grant from the Chancery Court of Davidson County. The SVTN promotes volunteer transportation and recruits volunteers to drive older adults around their community to reach essential appointments. All of the volunteer transportation programs are non-profits and are 100% volunteer driven. Currently there are over 15 programs providing volunteer transportation across Tennessee, and that number is expected to grow over the next 2 years.

Society of St. Andrew: Volunteer to #EndHunger and #SaveTheFood

Rev. Jeannie M. Hunter, TN Regional Director, Society of St. Andrew

Society of St. Andrew gleans excess food from farms, farmers' markets, and food processing facilities. We deliver that food, for free, to existing agencies that feed hungry people. We work in both food waste prevention and hunger alleviation, with volunteer experiences available in the farm field, a school, the office, and more.

In 2019, the Tennessee office kept over a million pounds of good food from going to waste by donating it to our hungry neighbors. Join us in 2020 as we expand into school cafeterias, educate more people about waste and hunger, and experience a sunny day on a farm.

Tennessee Serves

Amy Stewart, Tennessee Residence Manager, Office of the First Lady

Tennessee Serves is a three-part initiative designed by Tennessee First Lady Maria Lee to serve, highlight and mobilize Tennesseans to serve one another and volunteer in their communities. Through Tennessee Serves, Lee works with nonprofits and county mayors to participate in service projects tailored to the unique needs of each community with a special focus on Tennessee's distressed counties. Lee also works to highlight the impactful nonprofits across the state so that others may see their great work and get involved. Lee hopes that Tennessee Serves will act as a mobilization mechanism to increase volunteer efforts across the Volunteer State.

Tennessee Service-Learning Consortium

Consortium Members

The Tennessee Service-Learning Consortium (TN-SLC) is a non-profit membership association of colleges and universities committed to promoting active citizenship as an aim of higher education. The TN-SLC will serve as a key partner to other state efforts in creating solutions for higher education challenges of access, equity, and accountability while promoting engaged citizenship.

Founded by institutional service- learning representatives across the state, the TN-SLC provides leadership in advocating, supporting, and increasing student involvement in academic and co-curricular-based public service.
